A cursed typhoon day

Today must be a happy day for students because of the super typhoon that hit Hong Kong. Some of my classmates screamed when we received the message from the school.

Although this was good news to us, the typhoon was a nightmare for the public! Our classroom was full of water. Maybe someone had forgotten to close the windows yesterday. When I went out on to the street, I found everything was in chaos. Miscellaneous things were thrown up in the air as if doomsday was coming!

Maybe I had the special skill of mental metamorphosis. When I saw unhappy people, I felt very happy. While I were walking back home, I was fantasizing how I could enjoy my beautiful life at home.

While I was walking towards my house, I heard a vague screaming sound. I expected something bad had happened. Some ominous premonition surged inside me. I immediately rushed to my house. I saw a building was on fire near my house. Lots of people on the street were frightened when they witnessed this. A fire engine and an ambulance came soon.

Luckily, nothing happened to me and my family. I still felt frightened during the typhoon. I noted that it was not good news to have a typhoon hitting Hong Kong. It may cause huge economic loss!
